McGrath And Quist Defeated.

MIXED DOUBLES SEMI-FINALS AT AUTEUIL

Paris, To-day.

Fred Perry and G. P. Hughes, Britain's Davis Cup doubles players, won the French Lawn Tennis title yesterday when they beat Vivian McGrath and Adrian Quist, the Australian pair, in a four-set final.

Fred Perry also reached the all-British Final of the Mixed Doubles in partnership with Miss Betty Nuttall.

Perry and Hughes, who lost to Enrique Maier and Durvall in the Davis Cup encounter against Spain, beat Henri Cochet and Andre Merillon in the semi-finals, while the Australian pair defeated Jean Borotra and Jacques Brugnon, the French Davis Cup pair, after five gruelling sets.

N. Farquharson, the South African Davis Cup player, partnered Miss Ryan, the famous American double player, but the pair, after winning the first set against Perry and Betty Nuttall, lacked the stamina essential to success in international tennis, losing 6-love in the final set.

It is understood that both these pairs will be competing at Wimbledon next month.

THE RESULTS.

F. J. Perry and G. P. Hughes (Britain) beat V. McGrath and A. Quist (Australia) 2-6, 6-4, 2-6, 7-5.

VON SCHLEICHER A PRISONER?

Earlier Report Denied In Berlin.

Berlin, To-day.

A denial has been issued here, to the report made yesterday, that General Von Schleicher, ex-Chancellor of Germany, is a prisoner on parole in the fortress at Kuestrin.

General Von Schleicher succeeded to the Chancellorship in January, when Captain Von Papen was forced to resign, owing to opposition in the Reichstag, and was himself compelled to resign after a few months in office. No mention has been made of him in the cables since just before the General Election on March 8, when Chancellor Hitler assumed office.—Reuter.

AIRWOMAN'S SUICIDE NOW SUSPECTED

Two Bullets Wounds In Head.

SENSATIONAL DISCLOSURES IN MEDICAL REPORT

Shots Heard From Aviators' Rest Room

Aleppo, To-day.

A sensation has been caused by the official medical report on the death of Fraulein Marga Von Eitzdorf, which states that the well-known German aviatrix died under circumstances that point to suicide.

Fraulein Von Eitzdorf, who was attempting a flight from Berlin to Australia, made a defective landing at the Aleppo airport when attempting to land, on Sunday evening, and according to earlier reports, she succumbed to her injuries later.

It is now learned, however, that she climbed from the machine and was taken to the Aviators' Mess, where she was given every attention. Later, she retired to the Rest Room alone, at her own request.

Suddenly, two shots rang out, and when the occupants of the Mess reached the room, they found her dead on the bed, with the gun, which she carried during her journey, beside her. There were two bullet wounds in her head.

No statement was left by Fraulein Von Eitzdorf, and no motive for suicide is known.—Reuter.

Fraulein Von Eitzdorf was only 25 years of age, and secured a certificate when only 19 years old, becoming second pilot on the Luftthansa service. In 1928 she took her diploma in trick flying and obtained a first class pilot's certificate in 1930.

Among her flying feats is her solo flight from Berlin to Japan, made in 1931, and on this occasion, she called at Hong Kong on her return trip.

London, To-day.

In the House of Commons yesterday, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. Neville Chamberlain, said that he was not able at present to say whether he would be able to make any statement on the American debt situation before the Whitsuntide adjournment, next Friday.

Answering further question, he said that the amounts due in sterling to America in the present financial year, at the present rate of $3.981½, to the pound, were £19,059,000 on June 15, and £29,528,000 on December 15, or an approximate total of £48,680,000.—British Wireless Service.

New York, To-day.

It is understood that negotiations for the barter of products will open shortly between the United States Government and representatives of the U.S.S.R. Products especially considered will be American cotton and livestock and Russian manganese chrome ore, pulpwood and asbestos.

Ex-Senator Brookhart, who was recently appointed as special assistant to the Department of Agriculture, to study the possibility of expanding United States exports in Eastern Europe, has declared that he will give close attention to United States-Soviet trade, which, in 1932, was only one-tenth of the volume of that of previous years.—Reuter.

DUMPING MENACE

Japan's Low Level Of Wages.

MR. RUNCIMAN REITERATES PROTECTION ASSURANCE

London, To-day.

Questions relating to textiles and other goods produced by cheap labour in Japan, were asked in the House of Commons, yesterday.

The President of the Board of Trade, Mr. Walter Runciman, said that he was aware of the growing extent of Japanese competition and of the low level of wages ruling for industrial workers in Japan, and the whole question was under consideration.

Necessary steps were being taken to prevent unfair competition against British manufacturers, extending within the Empire. Notice, as announced, had been given of the withdrawal of the West African Colonies from the Anglo-Japanese trade agreement, so that they could be in a position to give preference to British goods.—British Wireless Service.

No change is indicated in the local dollar, which opened on demand this morning at 1/4%. Silver also remained unchanged yesterday, the spot and forward prices closing on the day at 18 15/16 and 19 respectively.

The London on New York cross rate advanced from £-G38.97½ on Monday to £-G38.9 yesterday, but owing to the United States holiday, no quotation is given for the New York on London rate, which closed on Monday at £-G44.

PEACE FOR TEN YEARS

ECONOMIC QUESTIONS TO BE SETTLED

Parity And Rights Of Disarmament.

PROBABLE STIPULATIONS IN AGREEMENT

Rome, To-day.

It is reliably learned that the Four Power Pact is likely to stipulate a formal agreement between the signatories to maintain peace for 10 years and to settle economic questions.

It refers to Articles 10, 16 and 19 of the League Covenant, and recognises parity and rights of disarmament.

It is, however, understood that the application of parity is suspended for an agreed period.—Reuter.

A Reuter message yesterday stated that in view of the reassuring cables from London and Paris, it is believed that the final acceptance of the Four-Power Pact will be announced to-day.

The Pact will be signed immediately France and Britain signify their agreement.

Non-Aggression Pact.

DISARMAMENT DISCUSSION AT GENEVA.

London, To-day.

During the discussion of the question of a pact of non-aggression which occupied most of yesterday, in the General Commission of the Disarmament Conference, the American delegate, Mr. Norman Davis, speaking in accordance with President Roosevelt's message, declared that if the Conference wished to see a substantial measure of Disarmament, the United States would not be adverse to the conclusion of a universal pact forbidding resort to force.

The British delegate, Captain Anthony Eden, emphasised the importance of this declaration, and added that the question could be further discussed on the second reading.—British Wireless Service.

According to Chinese reports both Major-General Koiso and Lieutenant-General Okamura, Marshal Muto's Chief and Vice-Chief of Staff, respectively, are now in Tangku.

The former is not expected to stay long, as Lieutenant-General Okamura is the chief Japanese delegate to the Peace Conference.

The Chinese press states that the special train bearing the Chinese delegates arrived at Tangku yesterday afternoon and that soon afterwards the delegates of both sides met informally. They will continue the discussions to-day.

The formal Conference is opening on June 1.—Reuter.

London, To-day.

Headed by a Naval Guard of 200 sailors from H.M.S. "Pembroke" marching with arms reversed, the body of Admiral of the Fleet, Lord Wester Wemyss, was taken in procession from the Admiralty to Westminster Abbey for the funeral service yesterday.

The coffin was covered with the White Ensign and was borne on a gun carriage drawn by 16 sailors. The pall bearers were high officers representing all branches of the fighting services.

Admiral Sir Reginald Tyrwhitt was present on behalf of the King, and the Prince of Wales and the Duke of Connaught were also represented.—British Wireless Service.

TWO RACING MOTORISTS IN FATAL CRASH

Tragedies In American Grand Prix.

THRILLING RACE WON IN RECORD TIME

Indianapolis, To-day.

Thousands of horrified spectators saw two of America's crack racing drivers crash to death, when their cars skidded during the 500-mile American Grand Prix, the world's most gruelling track race, held here yesterday.

The event was won by Louis Meyer driving an 8-cylinder Tiddo, in the record time of 4 hours 48 minutes 7.5 seconds, beating F. Frame's record speed average of 104.14 miles per hour, established last year.

Forty-two cars started in the race, but the first few laps thinned out the field considerably, many retiring with burst tyres and faulty oil feeds.

A thrilling duel was fought in the closing laps, Meyer striving to keep his short lead by driving low down on the banking, taking the curves on full throttle, thus giving the remaining contestants no chance to pass him.—Reuter.

PIRACY CAPTIVES STILL HELD.

Plight Of Nanchang Officers.

RELEASE DELAYED.

Dairen, To-day.

The expected release to-day of the kidnapped officers of the Nanchang failed to materialise, owing to another gang joining up with the bandits at present holding the captives, thus complicating the negotiations for their release.

The Japanese authorities in Newchwang are optimistic, but there is no telling when the release will be effected.—Reuter.

GLOUCESTER BUILDING BAND SLANDER CASE

Manager Sued By Band Conductor.

ALLEGED CRITICISM OF ORCHESTRA

"Driving The Crowd Away"

Frank Lewiston Adamson, otherwise known as Dick Adamson, musical director, claimed $1,000 damages from Percy Ingham Newman, manager of the Gloucester Building (Residential), of the Hong Kong Land Investment & Agency Co., Ltd., for alleged slander and libel, before the Puisse Judge, Mr. R. E. Lindell, at the Supreme Court this morning.

The statement of claim sets out that plaintiff is a musical director and a player of the saxophone, clarinet and trumpet carrying on business in Hong Kong; and that defendant is the manager of the Gloucester Building (Residential).

On the 31st January, 1933, defendant falsely and maliciously wrote to the plaintiff and published to a Mrs. M. M. Drake, typist, the following words:—

"With reference to your orchestra, you surely must have realised that their performance has been anything but satisfactory to date either in the management or to the guests. Numerous complaints have been received from time to time both from European and Chinese patrons to the effect that they find it impossible to dance to the time and tunes being rendered at present."

"In many instances these complaints have been mentioned to you but to all appearances no effort has been made on your part to rectify these very obvious faults and it is impossible to continue along these lines. Instead of the orchestra being an added attraction to the Gloucester it is driving customers away, at the same time being a very heavy expense."

"Had you held daily practices and had an up-to-date repertoire some degree of efficiency might have been attained but the same old tunes being played repeatedly simply drive all music lovers away."

"We exceedingly regret having to take this step which we feel might easily have been avoided had we had your entire co-operation with a view to making the venture a complete success."

"GOING TO GET RID OF BAND."

On February 23, defendant falsely and maliciously, the statement alleges, spoke and published of the plaintiff the following words:—

"The band is no good and I am fed up to the teeth with them and am getting rid of them. There is Adamson—you know him—that tramp."

MONSOON THREAT TO CLIMBERS

Attempt On Mount Everest.

RUTTLEDGE EXPEDITION DELAYED

London, To-day.

There are prospects that the Rutledge Mount Everest Expedition may experience a setback owing to the breaking of the monsoon, according to reports received here yesterday from Darjeeling.

The monsoon has already reached Calcutta and is expected to reach the Mt. Everest district this week.

It is believed that the climbers who are led by Mr. Hugh Rutledge, will therefore do their utmost to carry out the assault on the peak before the week-end.

If this is impossible, they may postpone the attempt until October, after the monsoon season is over.—Reuter.

BACKLESS BATHING SUITS.

Waterproof Velvet For Caps.

London.

The Amateur Swimming Association has decided to allow women competitors to wear backless bathing suits. Under the old rule the costumes had to reach nearly up to the neck, back and front.

It was a fight to pass the new rule, however. Most of the opposition came from members in the North of England, who thought the new backless costumes too daring. For sea bathing the colours which will be fashionable for the coming summer are Venetian scarlet, kingfisher, and goldfish.

In design, bathing suits are still daring. One is a startling nudist model in flesh-coloured wool. Another has scales like a fish.

Most of the new backless models slope upward from a low waistline at the back, to a fastening round the neck, with nothing covering the arms or shoulders.

Waterproof velvet is to be the new material for bathing caps.—Reuter.

LONG LIFE FOR SHORT HAIR.

Grey Favourite For Lacquered Locks.

London.

Short hair, which is predicted by that hairdressing authority, M. Gaston Boudou, to go on indefinitely in fashion, is not such a novelty. He declares that he has some prints which show that women wore shingled hair in 1812.

He says that the decided tendency at the moment is for artificially coloured hair, moulded, hardened, and often lacquered in position.

This vogue has now reached the hairdressing departments of the large stores in London. Grey, so far, is the favourite colour for lacquered hair.

Hats of natural hair are the latest idea in the world of Parisian fashion. They are very light, lacquered, and made to match the wearer's natural locks.—Reuter

PREMATURE GREY HAIR.

Danger Of Frequent Shampooing.

Grey hair is often premature. It sometimes comes in youth through worry or sickness, sometimes youthful grayness is inherited. Yet it can be checked to a certain extent by proper care of the scalp.

Often too frequent shampooing will cause the hair to fade earlier than it should. Try a shampoo powder which contains just sufficient henna to give the hair life, gloss and fluffiness, but which does not in the slightest change the colour of the hair from its original shade.

Brush the hair nightly to clean and stimulate it, and shampoo not more frequently than once or twice a month.

Gray hair is quite lovely, but it must be free of yellowish tints and streakiness, which is usually the base of the transition period. There is a reliable preparation called a 'tonic for whitening gray hair' which will aid the hair in turning white and even.

The yellow tinge which frequently destroys the beauty of white hair often comes from the use of hot irons and hot water. Even strong sunshine will put unwelcome yellow in white hair.

WHAT LONDON IS WEARING

Skirts Flare At Bottom.

WIDE BELTS CONTINUE

London.

Tangerine is the favourite colour of Maison Arthur, and it combined beautifully with grey—in suits and in evening gowns.

The cape sleeve is still greatly used in coats and wraps. All the sleeves are extremely short, some being just a little cape-effect drop over the shoulder.

Skirts flare at the bottom, being a little bit longer for afternoon wear.

Stiff white collars and cuffs with navy blue dresses are being taken up now by many dressmakers.

Wide belts appear on every belted model.

Red, white and blue ropes of cotton chenille were used to dress the neck of a sports frock of white lacquered linen.

Plain chiffon is put over lacquered satin for evening frocks, giving the effect of looking into water through a glass bowl. The fashion for "wet" looking fabrics still continues.

New buttons are large and round—in white, or pastel colours like tiddleywinks.

African ostrich plumes have made a sensational comeback in popularity—particularly in evening fans. One evening cloak shown was made entirely of pure white feathers on a net foundation. A lingerie wrap of orchid had striking ten-inch-wide cuffs made of deep orchid dyed feathers.

Furs are being dyed new shades too. Ermine coats are now appearing in a special tint of palest chalk grey.—Reuter.

BRIDGE NOTES

OBJECTIONS TO CONTRACT BRIDGE

(By A. E. MANNING FOSTER).

London. Although no reliable statistics are available, it has been stated that little more than half the Bridge players in this country have taken to Contract. At least 49 per cent, it is alleged, still adhere to Auction. This, I should think, is very likely true. While it may be a matter of regret to the ultra-enthusiastic Contract "fans" who prophesied the early death of Auction, I find no reason for lamentation. I should like to see both games continue side by side, so that we can "ring the changes" and indulge in that variety which is the spice of life. But the history of card games of the Whist family is against me. They obey a law of evolution, and one game supersedes another as surely as night follows day. If this be so, Auction must die a natural death, although it may take an unconscionable time in doing so.

The opposition to Contract is by no means confined to old fogies or Diehards, who object on general principles to anything new. It is the women, and especially the women of London, who have made Contract Bridge a social success. Into several of the London Clubs which are still the strongholds of men, the game has not penetrated. In some clubs, after a trial, it has been abandoned.

Why Contract Bridge makes such special appeal to women is an interesting subject of speculation for the psychologist. I think there are many reasons, but I do not at the moment propose to enter into them. I hazard the opinion, however, that women players of the game outnumber men in the proportion of two to one. I find, amongst men, many grudging players of the game. They would prefer to play Auction, but have had to adopt Contract because otherwise they would be shut out. The various criticisms of Contract which come from all parts of the country cannot be dismissed lightly. The fact must be faced that there are many Bridge players who dislike Contract actively and intensely and they are entitled to have their opinions expressed. In analysing the grounds of their complaints it must not be supposed that I agree with their views, or with, if you like, their prejudices. But I think they should be heard. There are those who object to Contract because it is, in the form in which we play it, purely American. Their attitude is—"Why should England, which always has been the leader in card games, meekly submit to being dictated to by Americans?" This seems to be merely insular and I dismiss it lightly. If the game is good it does not matter from what source it comes.

Granted that there are many American Bridge methods which we may dislike, it seems to me a flimsy and unworthy ground of objection to a game as a game. Far more cogent is the criticism that in structure, in scoring, and in essential features it is unsound. "Why," as a distinguished authority on mathematics writes, "do not people play some sensible game with a sensible count?" Our Contract is open to objection, is, in fact, "vulnerable." The scoring is neither equitable nor logical. It is designed on grandiose bombastic lines. We think in hundreds and thousands and lose our sense of proportion. The structure is not on a scientific basis. The French, who are very quick-witted as a race and as card players, will have nothing to do with American Contract. In France and Belgium American Contract has made no headway. Not that they object to the general principles of Contract. On the contrary, they play universally "Plafond," which is, in the main, Contract with Auction Bridge scoring. They consider American Contract an offense against "good taste and good manners," an "ungentlemanly" game, and they refuse to have anything to do with it in their clubs. This may or may not be going too far. My personal preference is for Plafond. But that is neither here nor there. We are committed by the Portland Club and by general consent to American Bridge. We must, therefore, make the best of it.

We have already purged ourselves of many of its excesses, and to a large extent have anglicised it in our own peculiar way. But much remains to be done. We have not exactly what we should do and what we should not do. And if we had, probably we should not obey either. The policy of laissez-faire applies to many. Individual freedom is cherished, and rightly cherished, although we have not much of it left. In life, it is argued that in Bridge, at any rate, we may well still cling to our personal and "natural" devices. The fallacy lies in the fact that we are committed, for better or worse, to a highly artificial game. In a game of such character conventions must predominate, and it is useless to try to abolish them altogether. All we can hope to do is to draw a line and say that such and such conventions are acceptable or at least permissible, and leave it at that. The conventions are, however, a stumbling-block, and the disputes about them deter many people from adopting the game.

But it is not to be supposed that our present form of Contract is final. As time goes on a new and better form will be evolved. I have made various suggestions for improvement. In time, I feel sure all suits will rank equally for scoring, and the No-Trump declaration will be deprived of its priority. Instead of scoring in hundreds we shall be content with tens. There is no object in recording high figures, and they have a bad psychological effect on players. All suits and No-Trumps, while retaining their precedence in bidding, might be scored at 10 points per trick and game would involve making 40 points. The invulnerable and vulnerable features might be retained. There is something in the idea. But it should be put upon a more equitable basis. At present it is possible for a non-vulnerable side to prevent a certain game or slam bid at extremely disproportionate penalties. Further, the rewards for slams are wrong.

I realise, however, that at the present time criticism is out of place, and, while sympathising with those players who object to Contract because they think it all wrong or, as one well known player puts it, "poisonous" (rather strong, that), I hold hopes out to them that in the course of time the manifest defects in the game will be remedied.

"STATE FAIR"—KING'S THEATRE

Truth aids fiction in "State Fair," the prize novel by Phil Strong upon which Fox Films' all-star picture of the same name is based.

The story concerns the loves and adventures of four members of a farm family at a Midwest state fair, and author Strong is intimately acquainted with his characters and locale.

He was raised in a rural community such as he describes in his book and as a newspaper reporter "covered" many state fairs.

With one exception, the characters played in the Fox picture by Jauet Gaynor, Will Rogers, Lew Ayres, Sally Eilers Norman Foster, Frank Craven, Louise Dresser and Victor Jory are fictional but they represent authentic types.

The exception is the country storekeeper portrayed by Craven. That storekeeper in real life is E. L. Strong, the author's uncle and proprietor of a rural general merchandising establishment.

"DESTINY RIDES AGAIN"— CENTRAL THEATRE

Nothing of the "super-special" production was attempted in the picture that brings Tom Mix back to the screen. Apparently Universal's aim was to give Mix a return vehicle of the same school as the series of Westerns in which he previously won fame.

His enormous kid following will be delighted, but there is not much entertainment for adult audiences. There have been many better Westerns and scores of worse ones.

The story is of a righteous vengeance theme. Mix serves a prison sentence after being double-crossed by his trusted partner. Upon his release, he rides again to revenge all the wrongs for which he has suffered. Finding a few other miscellaneous wrongs in his journey, he rights them, too.

Mix is as always—aided and abetted by the indefatigable Tony. Claudia Dell is a bit miscast as a typical heroine of the old West. Earle Foxe is an A-1 villain.

"MADAME BUTTERFLY"— QUEEN'S THEATRE

"Madame Butterfly," the Paramount film showing at the Queen's Theatre, has an excellent cast, comprising Sylvia Sydney, Cary Grant, Charlie Ruggles Irving Pichel, Helen Jerome Eddy and many others.

Many of the scenes in this picture, which feature the romance between an American naval officer and a Japanese girl, were actually made in Japan. Temples, public buildings, gardens and private homes all appear in the film. The great Buddha which has been photographed for the first time for motion picture purposes is the largest in Japan and is sacred to all Buddhists.

Sylvia Sydney excels in her role of a high-born Japanese girl. Her costumes are personal gifts to her from Sadako Kitajima, one of the leading actresses of the Imperial Theatre.

"TEMPLE TOWER"—STAR THEATRE

"Temple Tower," the detective thriller written by "Sapper," and made into a film by Fox, is now showing at the Star Theatre. It is another of the well-known "Bull-dog Drummond" tales that have proved so popular with the public.

Kenneth McKenna plays the role of "Bull-dog Drummond," and brings to the screen version of the story, a realistic characterisation of the famous hero. The picture is full of eerie thrills, such as the public have been led to expect from "Sapper."

"THE NIGHT OF JUNE 13"— MAJESTIC THEATRE

"The Night of June 13," now showing at the Majestic Theatre, is not by any means a great film, but it is always workmanlike and sincere, and at times very amusing. A jealous wife shoots herself. Her husband is tried for her murder. Nobody dislikes him, and yet, for a variety of selfish reasons, witnesses go into the box and lie about what they saw—all, in fact, except two.

Adrianne Allen is disturbingly convincing as the crazy wife, and Olive Brook does his best to achieve the suburban atmosphere.

AN ANGLO-CHINESE COMEDY

Humour Of Life On China Station.

"BARQUE AND THE BIGHT"

London.

An Anglo-Chinese satirical play has been successfully presented at the Grafton Theatre, London.

It is called "Barque and the Bight," by Reginald Meredith, and is about a meeting between a British and a Chinese Admiral.

The British Admiral, Sir Bruce Bustover, cheery but brusque, knows no Chinese and a young member of the Consul-General's staff acts as interpreter when Admiral Wei Feng-ling and Sir Bruce meet at a ceremonial tea party.

Sir Bruce is annoyed with the Chinese Admiral because he had failed to keep a previous appointment—due, Admiral Wei explains, to an order from a Chinese Viceroy.

The interpreter makes all go well by telling Admiral Wei the exact opposite of what Sir Bruce says, though the party ends abruptly with Admiral Wei withdrawing politely when Admiral Bustover accidentally touches his saucer.

After a while Admiral Wei's Flag Captain comes back and congratulates the interpreter. The Flag-Captain, as an old Etonian and a Cambridge graduate, had understood every word that was said during the party—but she does not intend to "give the show away!"—Reuter.

AMERICA EIGHTY YEARS AGO.Forgotten Painter's Drawings.

Among the hundreds of forgotten early Victorian artists L. J. Cranstone (who showed five works between 1845 and 1867 at the Royal Academy) seems destined to be brought to notice again by his capable and accurate water-colour drawings of places of interest in Canada and America painted between 1850 and 1860.

About eighty of these drawings appeared at Sotheby's on March 29. Cranstone apparently landed at Halifax, Nova Scotia, and his drawing of the old market-place is obviously a true glimpse of busy life in the seaport which then had only 25,000 inhabitants.

Of course the painter visited Niagara Falls, and one could wish that he had done more Canadian scenes, especially as the Dominion art galleries are now wisely collecting early topographical scenes. But he apparently was more attracted by the Eastern provinces of the United States, and was very busy in Virginia at Richmond and Wheeling, and also at Richmond (Indiana), Covington and Newport (Kentucky), and Bridgeport and Cincinnati (Ohio).

In Defence Of The R.A.D.A.High Percentage Of Successes*FALSE INFERENCES MADE

(By Sydney W. Carroll).

I read recently in a public journal of some importance an arraignment of the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art. Does this institution, questioned the writer, really do any good? Are not the students, who usually pay "fees" for a period of four terms, actually wasting their time? What proportion of the students reappear on the professional stage? Does the R.A.D.A. encourage amateurishness? And so on.

These pertinent queries, put forward as they are by one who is obviously an ex-student of the Academy, almost prompt me to adopt a similar "willing to wound but yet afraid to strike" attitude.

I could, I believe, easily defend the institution by a series of retorting interrogations of devastating significance. I prefer, however, to come directly to the mutton and answer, on behalf of Mr. Kenneth Barnes and his admirable training ground for actors and actresses, the sundry insinuations and innuendoes advanced so courageously by the ex-student in question.

Discouraging "Stage-Strucks." "Fees," that overworked word in the cynic's vocabulary, are necessary even in the best-conducted schools, and the better and the more reliable the school the larger the fees and the longer the need for paying them.

More students of the R.A.D.A. are represented prominently on the active stage of to-day than come from all the other sources of supply put together. The proportion of professional actors and actresses drawn from the ranks of the R.A.D.A. is a very large one.

It definitely discourages incompetent stage-strucks, and the circumstance that no fewer than forty-eight applicants have been rejected for the last three terms at the entrance tests, and that no fewer than thirty-three applicants for the Leverhulme Scholarships have also been rejected during the last two terms, must be taken as ample proof of the severity of the tests applied by the management.

A Fine Record.

Can anyone of reasonable disposition justly demand that a training school for young players must in order to justify its existence convert all its students into first-class performers? We have only to turn to the triumphant and lengthy list of highly successful artists who owe their early stage education to the R.A.D.A. and equally owe their first engagements to the facilities afforded them by their public appearances as students to realise immediately how graceless and unfair is the imputation of uselessness levelled against the R.A.D.A. and its directors.

I have, for example, in my own company at the Ambassadors four people all of whom have received the highest commendation from the critics and public for their talents and capacities—Valentine Rooker, Margaretta Scott, Diana Churchill, and Wallace Douglas. I am sure that each one of these clever young people would willingly admit a deep debt to the R.A.D.A.

Honoured Names.

I have reason to believe that the writer of the attack was a student of the R.A.D.A. at the same time as were Benita Hume, Gwendoline Evans, John Gielgud, Pamela Carme, Reginald Gardner, Beatrix Lehmann, Agnes Laughlin, Vera Bryer, Rita Page, Robert Holmes, Anthony Ireland, Ursula Jeans, Henry Cass, Alan Napier, and several other successful young actors. The principal of the Academy could scarcely be expected to convert into a popular malinee idol a young man whose metier was obviously journalism, of the ultra modern kind.

How can detractors of the R.A.D.A. explain away the success of Mr. Robert Atkins, the late Miss Meggie Albanesi, Miss Adriane Allen, Miss Joan Barry, Miss Joyce Bland, Miss Laura Cowie, Mr. Colin Clive, Miss Fabia Drake, Miss Adela Dixon, Mr. Robert Douglas, Mr. Robert Harris, Mr. Charles Laughlin, Miss Iris Hoey, Mr. Cedric Hardwick, Mr. Miles Malleon, Miss Flora Robson, Miss Athene Seyler, Miss Nora Swinburne, Mr. Ion Swinley, Miss Viola Tree, Miss Beatrix Thomson, Miss Margaret Vines, Mr. Austin Trevor, and hundreds more of now recognised and established stage favourites, all and each trained under R.A.D.A. methods?

The Newest Batch.

Already no fewer than five of the successful students seen at the last Haymarket Theatre show of the R.A.D.A. public contest have been offered and accepted remunerative engagements on either stage or screen.

The writer of this onslaught is equitable enough to describe Mr. Barnes as an "eminently just" man. It is sincerely to be hoped that the quality of justice he so much admires he may find reflected in himself. If he does he will be forced to concede that his imputations are as unjust as his inferences are false. No repertory company and no small-part experience in provincial touring companies can approach in a decade the sum total of achievement recorded in four to six terms spent at this much-maligned institution.

NAPOLEON'S UNCLEPictures Belonging To Cardinal Fesch.

In history Cardinal Fesch is remembered as the young uncle (by marriage) of the great Napoleon. In art he was famous as a collector, and when he died in 1830 he left many masterpieces to the city of Lyons, of which he had been Archbishop.

There was a Fesch sale in Paris about 1844, and a member of the family of the late Count Francesco Mesina, Chamberlain to the Pope, bought several moderate pictures. These were sent from Malta to Sotheby's recently, and their quality may be measured by the fact that 53 realised about £300, the highest price being £25 for an Italian coast scene by Jan Lingelbach, whose "Hay Harvest" 1661, was bought for the National Gallery in 1871, when the Peel collection was acquired en bloc.

A NAMELESS THEATRE

A theatre in which the play, the author, and the entire company are to be nameless is to be formed at the Ballet Club, London. The opening season will be given this summer, when the programme is to include two modern English plays, a non-Shakespearean Elizabethan tragedy, a foreign classic, a modern translation, and a revival.

The company is to be wholly professional, and it will have to be composed of actors who prefer their art to publicity. No names will be given until a week after production, but guesses will doubtless be allowed.

Still Silent About War Debts.

President Roosevelt, in his broadcast speech to the American nation, explained at length the main objectives of his policy for the restoration of prosperity to the United States and to the world. He ranged very wide, covered many subjects, yet omitted one of supreme interest to Britain and many other European countries. For not one word about War Debts, either directly or by implication, passed his lips. American citizens listening in over the wide expanse of the American Continent may not have noticed the omission, or, if they noticed it, may have supposed that if the President did not consider the matter worth a passing allusion, they need not concern themselves about it. All have admired the strength and courage with which the President has handled the internal problems which confronted him on entering office, but there is a growing concern at his stubborn silence on War Debts. He has given no sign of what is in his mind. Yet it is of daily increasing importance that Great Britain should know. For the next War Debt instalment is due on June 15, and the interval grows short. Will a Moratorium be declared in respect of the June payment, or will it not? If the President recommends a Moratorium, will Congress agree, or will the first serious challenge to his authority arise out of that dangerous subject? Reports are current that he is "contemplating" such a step, and Mr. MacDonald and Mr. Herriot certainly did not fail to apprise him of the issues which hang upon his contemplation. We can conceive nothing more disastrous than for the World Economic Conference to meet on June 12 without the Debtor Countries knowing whether they will be expected punctually to meet their obligations three days later. The Prime Minister, in his recent broadcast stated that he and the President were agreed that "if the International Conference were to achieve any final results the debt question must be settled one way or the other as quickly as possible—certainly before the Conference ends." (It was there referring to June, to the final settlement. But an immediate decision as to the June instalment is perhaps even more essential to success. If urgency can be pleaded—as it was pleaded by Mr. Norman Davis—for the British Government's acceptance of the President's proposed Tariff Truce, with even more cogency can it be pleaded by the British Government for a Debts Truce in respect of this June instalment. The late Mr. Graham received practically no support for a Tariff Truce at Geneva, when Great Britain was still a Free Trade country. Now that she is a Low Tariff country, she is being entreated by the Highest Tariff country to go into conference with one hand tied, knowing that she will there be expected to consent to any all-round reduction that may be agreeable to the others. The rest of the world will hope that the "well-grounded plan" into which the President suggested that his manifold proposals will be found to dovetail, like the components of a jig-saw puzzle, will be equally acceptable to all when its outline is more clearly discernible. He expresses complete confidence that he will be able to manage his inflated currency so that commodity prices may "stay put" at the precise higher level desired. Only the event can show. Many have tried; success has been rarer than failure.

Unemployment In Britain.

There is substantial reason for satisfaction in the continued improvement of the figures of unemployment in Britain. In February there was a fall of 46,000, in March of 80,000, and the returns for April show a further decline of 78,000. The total has thus been brought below 2,700,000. This is indeed serious enough, but a reduction of more than 200,000 in three months of such international uneasiness is far greater than could have been expected. No hastily sanguine inferences should be drawn. At this time of year employment has normally an increase, and a considerable part of the improvement is due to the activity of trades, such as building and transport services, which are subject to this seasonal influence. Beyond these there has been greater activity in engineering works and shipyards. Others of Britain's basic industries, however, mining, iron and steel and cotton, gave no sign of recovery. Yet it is of much significance that the general balance of recovery should have been so well maintained. Britain found employment last month for 9,534,000 people, 91,000 more than a year ago. Last year April disappointed the promise of March, this year it has done equally well. Signs of permanent improvement are not yet clear, but hope is firmly supported.

HERE, THERE and EVERYWHERE

Gold Mines In Britain.

The vaults of the Bank of England are not the only place where gold may be found in Britain. The wedding rings of the Queen, the Princess Royal, and the Duchess of York, for instance, were made of Welsh gold. The brides of the Sutherland family are married with rings from the mine at Kildonan, in Sutherlandshire, and there is a gold reef underlying the Forest of Dean that is said to resemble that of the famous Witwatersrand in the Transvaal.

Now we get news that gold-mining is to be resumed in the hills of Carmarthenshire. Professor Bernard Holland has been granted a sixty-three-year lease, thus reviving an industry established by the Romans. In fact, the industry is older than that, for in the British Museum there is a more ancient corselet of Welsh gold, and a breast-plate of beaten gold was found in a Celtic "barrow" in North Wales. In the thirty years before 1911, £370,000 worth of gold was taken from a mine near Dolgelly. Besides the mine at Kildonan, there are many other goldfields in Scotland. A nugget weighing 27oz. was found in Lanarkshire, and nuggets have often been found in the mountain streams.

It appears that a man can be cured of stammering by teaching him to sing. Unfortunately a man can't be cured of singing by teaching him to stammer.

The Apt Reply.

A political candidate, after making a speech in an agricultural district, announced that he would be glad to answer any questions that might be put to him.

"You seem to know a lot about farmers' difficulties," said a voice from the back of the hall. "May I ask you a question?"

"Certainly," replied the candidate.

"How can you tell a bad egg?" went on the voice.

The candidate waited until the laughter had died away and then replied, "If I had anything to tell a bad egg, I think I should break it gently."

BROTHERLY LOVE.

The vicar had been emphasizing in his sermon the brotherhood of men.

One member of the congregation, who left before the collection, took him literally. Hurrying to the Vicarage he announced to the housekeeper that he was the brother of the clergyman, that he had come a long way and could do with a meal.

The best that the Vicarage could provide was set before him and he was making short work of it when the vicar arrived.

"You said we were all brothers," the unwelcome guest explained in extenuation.

"Yes," agreed the vicar, as he assisted his exit, "but now you may consider yourself a cousin once removed."

EUROPE'S NEED FOR COOL STATESMEN

TREATY REVISION TALK DISQUIETS FRANCE

PEACE FRAME-WORK CRACKING?

(By Brig-Gen. E. L. Spears, M.P.)

Brig-Gen. Spears has recently been to France, and has talked to politicians of all parties. In the article below he indicates the reactions he found there to recent events on the Continent.

It is a good thing there are a few cool-headed statesmen in Europe to-day. M. Daladier, the new French Prime Minister, is one of them. Present difficulties have not ruffled, though they may have perturbed him.

He comes from Provence, and his speech has the rich intonation of the exuberant South, which makes the calm self-possession and assurance of this black-clad, clean-shaven little man, with the clear blue eyes, engaging smile and strong chin all the more striking. The contrast between speech and manner is, in fact, as surprising as it would be to detect a whiff of garlic in a Laplander's cuisine.

Coolness is essential, for the situation of Europe to-day, as seen through French eyes, is very grave—graver by far than most people in England realise. France wonders whether recent events in Germany have made England understand that her fears were not without foundation, and that the German nation was not as entirely incapable of violence as we seemed so fondly to imagine.

But the fact that France is now in a position to say "I told you so!" does not in any way detract from her apprehensions.

The truth is that she feels the very structure of peace to be in danger. It is this fact, and not the excesses of Hitlerism, which is causing her the gravest fears to-day.

Even the severest shocks could be withstood if the framework of peace were strong and sound, but it seems to many French eyes to be cracking.

France has a far more vivid fear of war than we have. She fears it as a man with a broken arm fears a knock, and she believes that only with the active collaboration of England can peace be maintained. Her people are bent on peace with a kind of grim determination.

Britain's Position. They are convinced that another great war would mean literally the end of civilisation. A few weeks ago, it was safe to prophesy that under no circumstances whatever could they be induced to take up arms, whatever happened to their Eastern European Allies. To-day it is still hard, but no longer impossible, to conceive of circumstances that would induce them to fight.

Unpleasant though it may be to us to have to admit it, England can do more to dispel the danger of war than any other country. The real friends of peace in England to-day are those who have the courage to say that they are prepared to run the risk of burning their feet in stamping on the flames, whenever and wherever they appear.

This is a truth repugnant to every Englishman. The one thing we want is to be left alone, and not to be called upon to intervene, diplomatically or otherwise, in the affairs of Europe. But, like France, we also want peace.

If the feeling should grow abroad that England will not under any circumstances intervene if a breach of the peace is threatened, if the powerful influence she can exert is gradually withdrawn, or if she should stem to abandon the democratic procedure of the League of Nations, which, with all its faults, is still humanity's great hope, then indeed the chances of peace are slender.

Europe to-day contains a number of nations which owe their existence to the Peace Treaties, and whose populations have regained their freedom after centuries of oppression. Their liberties have been carved out of the ruins of empires that once held them in subjection.

As a result of the Prime Minister's conversations with Signor Mussolini these nations were suddenly told that machinery was to be set up to enable the Great Powers to revise the treaties. It is true they were also told, as an after-thought, that they would be consulted, but this concession seems to them much as if the cannibal chief consulted the missionary as to the sauce he would prefer to be served up in.

A "Preventive" War. From their point of view, the future seems to lead to one stark fact, that presently it may be soon or it may be late—they will be confronted by an irresistibly powerful bloc composed of Germany, Hungary and Italy, a solid mass of peoples that they and France will be unable to face on equal terms.

They have nothing to hope for and everything to fear from such a Central European bloc. The temptation, even the logic, of striking down the growing power before it is too strong, rather than run the risk of being swallowed, either whole or in part, at a later date, may prove irresistible.

The possibility of a "preventive war" as the sequel to "the war to end war": such is conceived by these nations to be the result of the visit to the Eternal City of two British statesmen.

The gesture of making the journey was an excellent one, and was much applauded, but no one thought for a moment that from the blending of the minds of two Prime Ministers, both nurtured in the Socialist creed, so starting a proposal would emanate.

It is difficult to understand how the alarm caused by the Rome Plan was not foreseen. How could the smaller nations not be offended when, after having been treated as equals, they heard it suggested that they should be relegated to a lower category, outside the board room where the Big Four took their decisions, to be called in and consulted only when their interests were involved?

No use telling them all this was within the framework of the League. To them it appeared the very negation of its principles.

No Repudiation. In Eastern Europe it is noted that Mr. MacDonald indignantly repudiated the suggestion that handing back Tanganyika to Germany had been discussed in Rome. Poles, Czechs, Rumanians—hand them back to their old masters, why not? But that we should give back some Africans to the Reich, what a preposterous ideal! That is the sort of comment one hears.

NEW YORK POLICE APPETITE.

6,000 Gather At Annual Breakfast.

New York. When 6,000 New York policemen sit down to breakfast, they eat enough food to stock an ocean-going liner for a transatlantic round trip.

That was the statement of a hotel chef who served 6,000 members of the New York Police Department after they had attended their annual Communion Mass at St. Patrick's Cathedral.

They consumed: 8,000 grapefruit, 24,000 scrambled eggs, 12,000 sausages, 32,500 rolls, 12,000 pounds of butter, 1,500 roast chickens, 1,200 pounds of oatmeal, 4,500 pounds of potatoes, 1,000 pounds of sugar, 900 gallons of coffee and 1,240 quarts of cream.

All this food disappeared in 45 minutes. —Reuter.

ROCK HURLED INTO YACHT CLUB

Crashes Into Ladies' Dressing Room.

BLASTING OPERATIONS AT SHAUKIWAN

Contractor Fined $300 For Neglect

Tang Shiu-kwong, a Chinese contractor, appeared this morning before Mr. W. Schofield at the Central Magistracy, and pleaded guilty to neglect while blasting rock with dynamite at 4.30 p.m. on May 11, at Shaukiwian.

Sub. Inspector Rogers of Bay View Police Station said that at about 4.30 p.m. on May 11, the accused was blasting rock on the new Shaukiwian Road near Oil Street.

Two pieces of rock with razor sharp edges, were hurled from an explosion, over some houses for a distance of 150 yards.

One of the pieces fell into Shaukiwian Road, narrowly missing a tramcar, while the other piece crashed through the wall of the Royal Hong Kong Yacht Club's Ladies' dressing room, making a hole two feet in diameter.

"Luckily at the time of the incident there was no one in the dressing room, although there were quite a number of lady members in the Club at the time," said Inspector Rogers.

No action was taken by the Yacht Club on account of the defendant's firm repairing the damage.

"There were no precautions taken, this being the defendant firm's second appearance in Court on the same charge," said the Inspector.

"You are fined $300 this time; as this is a very serious offence," said His Worship.

SMALL FIRE AT A.P.C. INSTALLATION

Quickly Quelled By Employees.

A small fire lasting about ten minutes, took place at the Asiatic Petroleum Company's installation at North Point, in the early hours of this morning.

One of three burners in the boiler house burst into flames, but the prompt action of some of the employees, quelled the flames within ten minutes with hand extinguishers.

A call was put through to the Fire Brigade, but the fire was out before the first appliance had arrived.

A representative of the China Mail was told by the Superintendent Engineer, A. P. C. that the installation was equipped with the most up to date fire-fighting equipment in the Colony.

INSTALMENT PLAN BABIES.

Bronx Hospital Beats The Stork.

Babies on the instalment plan has been a successful method of coping with the stork at the Bronx Maternity and Women's Hospital. But now the hospital is actually in the position of owing babies to certain mothers. So foresighted have expectant mothers been, that the stork is paid some time before his arrival.

More than 95 per cent. of the expectant mothers who are patients of the institution have availed themselves of the instalment plan.—Reuter.

FIREMEN QUIT RESCUING CATS.

Greenwich, Connecticut. A fireman was so badly scratched and bitten by a tree cat here that the Chief ruled against future rescues of this kind on private property.

The edict will not apply, however, to cats wide enough to choose trees on public property.—Reuter.

ATHLETICS RECORD THE "DOUBLE"

Yankees Nose Out Senators.

LOU GEHRIG'S NINTH HOMER

New York, To-day.

Philadelphia Athletics jumped into third place in the American Baseball league as the result of their "double" against Boston Braves in yesterday's star holiday programme.

It was the only "double" of the day, rain causing several games to be curtailed.

Durham, the White Sox pitcher held the Indians to five singles in the opener, three of these coming after the ninth innings. In the second game, however, the Cleveland batters ran riot to score 23 hits at the expense of six pitchers.

New York Yankees, world champions, had to be content with only one game against the Senators, rain causing the second game to be abandoned. Lou Gehrig hit his ninth homer to creep up on Wally Berger in the race for the home run crown.

Pittsburgh Pirates, National leaders, were forced to divide the spoils by the Cubs, Jorges hitting a homer to give the Chicago squad a 6-2 win in the second game.

Cucinello, who clouted two four-baggers against the Giants was largely responsible for Brooklyn Dodgers making a draw of their double header.

BONHAM STRAND PROPERTY

Widow's Claim For Recovery.

WITNESS CORRECTS HIS EVIDENCE

The case in which Li Tse-chi seeks to recover from Pong Tso-ching, of Shatin, the property known as No. 73, Bonham Strand, continued before the Chief Justice, Mr. J. R. Wood, at the Supreme Court this morning.

The cross examination of Ng Yuhon, one time director of the Tung Wah Hospital, and at present director of the Bank of Canton, who originally sold the property to Li Woon-nam, the deceased husband of Li Tse-shi, continued this morning.

Mr. H. G. Sheldon and Mr. Leo D'Almeida, e. Casto, J., (instructed by Messrs. Lo and Lo) are appearing for plaintiff, and Mr. Eldon Potter, K. C., and Mr. F. C. Jenhin, K. C., instructed by Messrs. Hastings and Co., for defendant.

At the beginning of the case this morning, witness stated that he wished to correct a statement he had made yesterday.

He had said yesterday that he had not seen Li Kai-loy, between the time of the sale of the property at an auction, and the present time. He now remembered that he had seen him once.

He admitted on being questioned that he had taken Li Kai-loy to Messrs. Johnstone Stokes and Masters, because Wong Wah-kon had asked him to do so. The purpose of the visit was that Li Kai-loy wished to have his affairs rearranged.

Mr. Potter: "Will you explain what you mean by that?" Witness: "I heard a conversation between Li Kai-loy and one of the solicitors. Li Kai-loy asked that the power of attorney be cancelled."

Mr. Potter: "The reason that Li Kai-loy desired the power of attorney to be cancelled was that he had been tricked by Li Hip-loy."

Witness: "I think so."

Mr. Potter: "And he was blaming Li Hip-loy for the mortgage being put through, and the consequent sale."

Witness: "The question must be to Li Kai-loy."

Mr. Potter: I thank you for your advice, but I am asking you to answer the question."

Witness: I dare not say anything on his behalf as to whether he would blame Li Hip-loy."

Mr. Potter: "I think the inference is a fair one."

He continued: "What kind of man is Li Kai-loy. Is he a simple sort of man, not astute?"

Witness: "In my opinion he is not clever."

The case is proceeding.

MUI-TSAI UNPAID

Wages Ordered Placed In Trust.

Chan Chuk-sang appeared before Mr. Schofield at the Central Magistracy this morning, summoned at the instance of the Secretary for Chinese Affairs, for failing to pay wages to her registered Mui-Tsai Lo Sui-king, for 9 years.

Sub. Inspector H. W. Fraser appeared for the prosecution.

Accused told His Worship that she had not paid Lo Sui-king wages, but had saved the latter's earnings for her.

Inspector Fraser said that on May 13, both the defendant and the Mui-Tsai came to the Secretary for Chinese Affairs, where the latter wanted her registration as a Mui-Tsai cancelled, as she was about to take up domestic service with the defendant.

"She would receive no wages for four years in order to pay off the amount which was originally paid for her—$145," said Insp. Fraser.

His Worship ordered that the sum of $55 be paid to the Secretary for Chinese Affairs in trust for Lo Sui-king, and that the defendant pay a fine of $20.

News In Brief.

Pun Chik-an, licensee of the Tai Lai Boarding House, 88, Colnhaught Road Central, was this morning fined $50 by Mr. W. Schofield at the Central Magistracy, for allowing prostitutes on his premises.

To-Day's Short Story.

By W. F. Harvey.

SIX days before Christmas and two years before the War, it was a curious conjunction as events showed, a fatal conjunction indeed, and not only for Graham Pelly, who sat in the deserted lounge of the Royal George Hotel, pondering on how best to turn to good account this hastily planned visit to Sidmouth.

His affairs were in a desperate condition. He owed money right and left. He had lost his job in Los Angeles, where, for nearly a year, he had worked for the films, and the American police wanted him. They apparently were the only people who did.

Graham Pelly carried lightly the burden of what he called misfortune. He was tall and handsome, and always managed to dress well. There was nothing of the actor about him except his knowledge of a winning smile and how to use it. You would have had to be a long time in his company before discovering that he was something less than a leisured and cultivated gentleman.

His immediate problem was a difficult one. Miss Pelly, his father's half-sister, lived in Sidmouth. She was old, an invalid, and very well off. As Graham knew—she had told him of it in her last letter—she had cut him out of her will. That was one another reason for a last attempt to extract something from her before it was too late.

How exactly did matters stand? Miss Pelly had some natural affection for him, which he, like a fool, had frittered away. She was of course bitterly disappointed in the little she knew of his career of broken promises and unachieved fulfilment. He realised that she had lost faith in him five years ago, when no reply had come to his cabled request for "South Africa for money to pay his fare home."

On the other hand, there was the information he had recently wormed out of that girl he had met in Brighton, who for three months had acted as her companion. It seemed that Miss Pelly had outlived her

Anglo-Catholic phase and was now absorbed in some new American brand of theosophy.

Was there, he wondered, an opening to be found there?—some bizarre gambit which he could use to play upon her superstition.

Miss Pelly had always been superstitious. Wasn't that the reason for her giving him the old emerald necklace to dispose of? And hadn't she once refused to make him an allowance on the thirteenth of the month, declaring that, for her, thirteen had always been an especially unlucky number?

If he could work on her sense of the superstitious, and combine with it a touch, perhaps more than a touch, of the repentant prodigal, and if only he had the courage to stick out for something big, Miss Pelly was not the sort of woman to do things by halves. She was, he knew, capable of generosity, and Graham determined that it would not be his fault if she lacked the opportunity. Fifteen hundred pounds would set him on his feet. Two thousand—he doubted if he could screw up his courage to ask for that—would be enough to get him in with Waterer and the crowd who were floating the new motor components syndicate. While he remembered, he would write to David Waterer and ask for a 24 hours' extension of the option.

He strolled over to the writing table. Three sheets of writing paper, a single envelope, and four pens, only one of which had not a crossed nib, were typical of the "Royal George" two years before the war.

Graham glanced at the calendar—December 19. He dipped his pen in the sediment at the bottom of the ink-pot and dated the letter, using, as he always did, a numeral for the month. Then he stopped. What an extraordinary coincidence! And might it not be the very thing that he had been looking for, the very thing which if suitably manipulated, would serve his purpose?

Hurriedly he finished his letter and then, with his pipe newly charged, sank back into the cushioned depths of the most comfortable of the armchairs before the fire. Graham Pelly had to rehearse a part.

Before and after lunch he made a few inquiries in the town. Miss Pelly, he found, still received occasional visitors, and though her health seemed to be failing she was not wholly confined to bed. For his purpose—if he were to get full value from this amazing coincidence—it was essential that he should be with her from seven to seven-thirty.

If he called in time for tea, would he be able to drag out the visit for three hours or would he be sent away with a flea in his ear after a bare ten minutes? It was a difficult point to decide, since by putting his visit too late he might find Miss Pelly unable to receive callers. It ended by his leaving the "Royal George" soon after six, just as a faint drizzle was beginning to fall.

He had no difficulty in finding Adelaide Lodge in its quiet road, and walked up the drive through a garden dark with evergreens to ring at the door of a neat, old-fashioned house, with a creeper-covered veranda dripping rain.

Miss Pelly was at home, but the old maid-servant seemed doubtful if she would receive visitors.

He took out a card, wrote across it, "I am only in Sidmouth for a few hours. Don't see me if it would disturb you," and following the maid into the breakfast-room, sat down to wait the turn of his luck.

As he listened to her step slowly mounting the stairs he felt a curious feeling of elation. "Something told him that he was master of the situation. He held the trump cards in his hand; all that was necessary was for him to keep his head and to watch for an opening. In the corner the grandfather clock—he remembered it at Lexington—ticked out the seconds. At last, after nearly five minutes, the maid returned. Miss Pelly would be glad to see him.

The accused who has had several convictions for larceny, was banished for a period of 10 years on April 18, this year.

Fung Chuen, a banished mendicant, was this morning sentenced to six months' hard labour, by Mr. Schofield at the Central Magistracy, for breach of a deportation order.

The school was banished for 10 years on March 20, this year.

(By Short Head.)

R. F. Luz, winner of the title in 1929 and one of the Colony's leading skips at the present moment, entered the Second Round of the Bowls Championship yesterday when he beat L. Luck (Civil Service) by 21 shots to 7 after 15 ends at the Kowloon Bowling Green Club.

J. J. Basto, another Recreio player, succeeded in eliminating F. Jones (Civil Service) by 22 shots to 18 after 24 ends, while J. Watson (Kowloon Bowling Green) beat J. Pooler by 21 shots to 8 to complete yesterday's programme at the Craigengower Cricket Club.

To Taste Like Ordinary Milk

It is richer, and will taste differently. Most people like the taste at once; others find that they must acquire the liking for it by using three or four tins. Once used regularly by the housewife, its purity, its richness, its convenience and its economy will ensure that she will never revert to the old fashioned milk supply.

WEIGHTS AND TIMES GIVEN

HELPFUL STATISTICS FOR PUNTER ON MONDAY

(By Rapier).

IN order to assist punters on Monday at the last race meeting of the first half of the season I have drawn up a list of all the winners this year and divided them into the various distances. In this list I have given the jockeys, weights, and the times of the winners and included the second and third ponies.

A list of this description gives the punter some idea as to which races the pony is best qualified, and also, in the case of a change of classification, the chances of the pony against his new rivals—the times and weights are given. All results are given in correct order.

23 STARTERS FOR DERBY TO-DAY

Manitoba Favourite On Heavy Course.

STEVE DONOGHUE RIDING LORD DERBY'S THRAPSTON

London, To-day.
Twenty-three horses are expected to face the starter for to-day's Derby, the Blue Riband of horse racing in England.

Manitoba, the favourite, at 6 to 1 is expected to win on the heavy 1 1/4 Miles Epsom course. Lord Woolavington's entry will have Gordon Richards, the champion jockey, in the saddle.

There are two last-minute changes in the jockeys. Smith will ride Mr. E. Edmond's Interlace instead of Nevett.

Steve Donoghue, winner of the Derby on six occasions, will take out Lord Derby's Thrapston instead of Wells.

Major H. Colmore's Blue Grass, which has been given to Fred Fox, is a doubtful starter owing to the hard going. The trainer will decide whether the horse will enter or be scratched after exercise this morning.

Hyperion, drawn by a Sourabaya syndicate, in the Irish Sweep is a well fancied candidate, being quoted at 21 to 2 at the latest call-over.—Reuter.

Sussex Held, Notts Win, In Home Cricket

Jack Hobbs Scores 221 Against Tourists.

HAMMOND AND LYON IN BIG PARTNERSHIP

Derby Dismissed For 47

London, To-day.
Sussex sustained a check to their County Cricket Championship aspirations yesterday when Warwickshire held them to a draw. With two games in hand Yorkshire, the champions, are only ten points in arrears of the southern county.

Notts effected a brilliant recovery at Lord's to record their first win in six games. Somerset also recorded their initial success when they accounted for Worcester, and Gloucester returned to their old forms by beating Leicester.

Hampshire secured first innings points from Derby in a low scoring game in the only other championship match.

Jack Hobbs opened his century account this season with a characteristic innings for 221 to enable Surrey to lead the West Indians by 10 runs in a match that produced 1,090 runs for 25 wickets. Charlie Roach, the tourists' opening bat scored 180 in dogged manner.

"Wally" Hammond, England's Test hero, and B. H. Lyon, his skipper, scored 368 between them towards Gloucester's total of 518 for 9, Hammond scoring 206, his second three-figure innings of the season, and Lyon hitting a hurricane 162.

Jack Hearne, the Middlesex veteran all-rounder, was unfortunate to be dismissed against Notts when only 7 runs short of his second century of the season. Sam Staples, the Notts slow bowler, captured 6 for 29 to turn the game in the northerners' favour.

Amazing bowling by Kennedy (4 for 9) and Boyes (6 for 5) dismissed Derbyshire for 47—the lowest total this season, but Townsend (7 for 35) prevented Hampshire from establishing a winning advantage.

Results as cable by Reuter:—

The room into which he was shown might well have been the Leamington drawing-room. There were the same bookcases, the same china cupboards, the same couch drawn up to the fire—but shaded from it by a screen—on which Miss Pelly lay propped up with cushions, a frail little old lady with black, quickly glancing bird-like eyes.

"Well, Graham," she said, "this is a wholly unexpected visit. Draw up that armchair to the fire and let me hear the news of your latest wanderings. You will excuse my not offering you tea. My companion, Miss Candler, is out for a few hours, and Hannah to-day is single-handed."

Graham Pelly began to talk, at first with a diffidence that was half real and half assumed. He told a tale of continued failure, the sort of story that Miss Pelly had expected, but he told it in a new way. He did not whine and he did not brag, and for once she thought him entirely untheatrical, even allowing herself to fall under the charm of his smile.

"I've mostly myself to blame," he said. "I've played the fool—cheated other people and cheated myself into the bargain. But, all the same, luck has been against me. I didn't believe in it at one time. I do now, and that's partly why I'm here. Down at Brighton the other day," and here Graham spoke with more hesitation for he was making up the story as he went on—"something induced me to go and see a professional medium. I've never had anything to do with that sort of thing—even now I doubt if I believe in it. She told me much that I already knew about myself, and one thing that I didn't know."

"And that?" interrupted Miss Pelly.

"That December 19th was my lucky day. That's why I came down here. I know what you are going to say. I'm here to cadge, and in a sense it's true. I want money desperately badly. I know you have cut me out of your will, and I don't wonder at it. But when that woman said 'December 19th is your lucky day,' it won't be lucky though next year, I made up my mind that I would put her words to the test. You were the only person I knew who could bring me good luck, and I turned to you."

"It's like this," he went on. "The recording angel alone couldn't count the new leaves I've turned over. I've lost faith in new resolves that are of my making. But if my luck were to turn—and you could turn it—if I were to meet with a new starting-point not of my choosing, if I could see in it the hand of Fate, then, why then, I do believe that I could still make good."

"If you were assured of the fatted calf," said Miss Pelly, "you would play the part of repentant prodigal. No—perhaps 'play the part' is rather hard. But tell me, Graham, this woman you saw at Brighton (and as likely as not she was an impostor) said, if I heard you rightly, that December 19th wouldn't be your lucky day next year. I wonder what she exactly meant by that? Had you told her anything about me? Did she know that you had a rich relation who was ailing?... who, for example, might be dead next year?"

Miss Pelly's fingers played nervously with the fringe of her shawl and a faint flush came into her cheeks.

"No," he answered, "she knew nothing about you. If I had thought of it like that I would never have mentioned the matter." He took up the poker and began to stir the fire.

"Don't fidget, Graham, I beg. How much money do you want?" "I owe about a thousand," he said, "and with nine hundred pounds to invest I could get a permanent post in a company with excellent prospects. I want nineteen hundred to two thousand pounds and I might as well ask for the moon."

shaky, but I dare say it will pass muster. Now I must fill in the figures 1912."

"Seven eleven."

"I've always believed in lucky and unlucky numbers. 1912, 1912, 1912. There's luck in threes."

"Seven twelve," said Graham.

"And now you can sign."

So intent was he in looking at the hands of the watch that he did not see that Miss Pelly's face had changed suddenly.

"No, I can't sign!" she almost screamed. "I can't sign! Your Brighton woman was right after all. She said next year would be no use to you. She meant that I shouldn't be here then. One, nine, one, two; add them together, they make thirteen. It's a warning for me, Graham, it's a warning for me!"

"What nonsense!" he exclaimed, his face white with anger. "Don't be hysterical. Pull yourself together and sign here!"

Miss Pelly half rose from her couch.

"I won't sign," she said, "nobody can make me, and you must not look at me like that. Take your eyes away from me and go!"

"I think you will sign," he said.

"I don't want anything unlucky to happen, but—"

"Now you are threatening me. This is intolerable. I shall—"

Miss Pelly never said what she would do. She sat up for a moment, her fingers clenched convulsively, her eyes dilated with fear, and then the pitifully frail body collapsed. Graham felt clumsily for the pulse at the wrist, but her hand lay lifeless in his.

What was he to do? The cheque lay before him on the table lacking only her signature. If his luck had failed he must trust to cunning.

Hurriedly he glanced round the room. The revolving bookcase—that would give him what he wanted. He no longer heard the ticking of the clock as he took down one volume after another until he came across a book of essays on the fly leaf of which was written in the delicate handwriting he knew so well Rachel M. Pelly.

Drawing up his chair to the table he seized the pen and with the book open before him gave all his mind to the task in hand.

The wind had risen and the December rain was beating fiercely against the windows. A steam wagon passed along the road, shaking the house with its vibrations.

And slowly in slithered feet old Hannah the maid came down the passage. She knocked at the door and opened it without waiting for a reply to witness Graham Pelly in the very act of forging a dead woman's signature.

MORE LINERS FOR SOUTHAMPTON.

All U.S. Line Ships

The United States Lines announced beginning on May 4, their vessels will dock at Southampton on the west-bound voyages, instead of anchoring in Cowes Roads for the embarkation and disembarkation of passengers.

This will mean a great increase in the dock dues payable to the Southern Railway Co. and of harbour dues payable to the Harbour Board. The only vessel of this line which has berthed at Southampton in recent years is the Leviathan, and her visits have hitherto been confined to the Harbour Board.

The only vessel of this line which has berthed at Southampton in recent years is the Leviathan, and her visits have hitherto been confined to the three winter voyages. The present arrangements by which the ships call at Plymouth on the eastward voyages will be unaltered.

The main service of the United States lines is maintained by the Leviathan (48,000 tons gross), the Manhattan (24,289 tons), and the Washington, a sister ship to the Manhattan, and the President Roosevelt (each about 14,000 tons) maintain the intermediate service.

A big increase of tonnage has been attracted to this port since the increased facilities of the dock extension have been available and the Southern Railway Company reduced the dock dues for calling vessels. The three principal ships of the North German Lloyd Co., the Europa, the Bremen and the Columbus, are to call at Southampton on west-bound trips from Bremerhaven to New York, the ships of the Rotterdam-Batavia service are to dock here when the number of passengers warrants it, and the French Transatlantic Co.'s ships are expected to call here instead of at Plymouth on the west-bound run.

BIRMINGHAM TRADE IMPROVES

Trade in the Birmingham and Midland area is improving and enquiries from South Africa and New Zealand cover electrical equipment, hardware stores and agricultural implements.

Coming on top of the alarming developments in Germany, one finds that this feeling has discouraged tendencies to make adjustments and concessions which were appearing here and there.

To-day concessions cannot be made for fear of their being mistaken for weakness and interpreted as signs of fear. Time must pass, and a calmer atmosphere be allowed to develop, before these burning and dangerous questions can be discussed further. To-day the greatest sacrifices would not help matters.

If Germany were given the Corridor and Italy Tunis, would that necessarily mean that the nations would live at peace together? No one can think so for a moment.

A new spirit must grow, but it will only develop and thrive if Europe sees that no infringement of peace will be tolerated, no unilateral repudiation of treaties countenanced. This is essential.

This country in particular must make it plain that it will not tolerate any disregard of the treaties. Our object is peace, our aim justice. These can only co-exist with order. First quell the riot, then issue your decrees.

Germany's Police.

The sooner Germany is reminded that she is infringing Article 162 of the Treaty of Versailles by increasing her armed police forces to a very large extent the better. To turn a blind eye on such facts is to cause alarm amongst some and entirely false ideas of impunity amongst others.

Meanwhile we might well explore the possibility of turning Article 19 of the Covenant, which provides for treaty revision, to practical use by evolving machinery which will in time enable nations which feel aggrieved to make out their case in the confidence that, should they prove it, they will receive justice. If this could be done an atmosphere would gradually be re-established in which disarmament and peace will thrive as they cannot do to-day.

Silva sought to prove that the letter dictated to Mrs. Drake, on January 31, and typed by her, constituted a libel in that she had read the letter after typing it.
His Lordship disagreed and ruled that there was no libel even though the typist had read the letter after it had been typed.
Mr. Silva asked His Lordship whether if the letter had been read by the typist, after it had been signed by defendant, that would constitute a libel.
Mr. MacKinley protested that he had been refused particulars on this point, and had acquiesced thinking that they were not relevant, but in view of the point raised by Mr. Silva, he wished for time in which to prepare his defence.
He desired His Lordship to state exactly what he had to contend against.
"I take it that there are now two slanders and one libel," he said.
The case was adjourned until this afternoon.
STEAM PIPE BURST AT A.P.C.

In consequence of the alleged words plaintiff had been greatly injured in his credit and reputation and in his business, and claimed $1,000 damages and costs.
Plaintiff claims that in consequence of the words mentioned he has been greatly injured in his credit and reputation and in his business.
Mr. W. A. MacKinley, of Messrs. Deacons, represented the defendant, and Mr. M. A. Silva, of Messrs. D'Almada Remedios & Silva, appeared for the plaintiff.
The proceedings this morning involved a point in law. Mr. M. A.
